

Greetings from the orient!

As you may have noticed, our website is still not fully functional. There are some blank spaces and empty sections here and there.

But if you have been with us since the earliest time, you would have noticed that our website has gone through several face lifts, even though it is still a newborn website.

The current look is almost final. There will not be any more major change to the look and feel in the near future.

I have always wanted to keep everyone informed of the progress of this website, but I kept putting off to actually posting it online. There is so much to do but so little time!

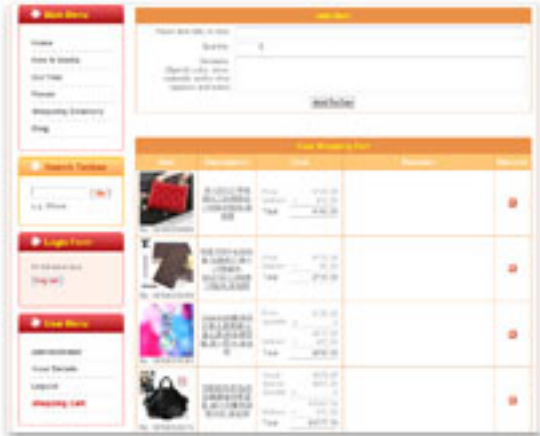

Currently, I'm working on the Shopping Cart, it is still under development but it is very promising.
